

THE IMPORTANCE OF PEDIGREE BREEDING

YOU OWE IT TO THE NEXT GENERATION

Why breed pedigree

Pedigree is Conservation – Without pedigree breeding our wonderful diversity of pig breeds would have been lost for ever. As a pedigree breeder you will be part of one of largest and longest running conservation projects in history.

Pedigree is Traceability – Most pedigree pigs can trace their family tree unbroken back over one hundred years. Pedigree gives buyers complete assurance about the provenance of the pigs or pork that they are buying.

Pedigree is Quality – Pedigree breeders conform to a set of independent breed standards to ensure that the best quality pigs go on to be the parents of the next generation.

The British Pig Association was founded in 1884. The Association is the official breed society and maintains the Herd Books for the following breeds:

Berkshire, British Landrace, British Saddleback, Duroc, Gloucestershire Old Spots, Hampshire, Large Black, Large White, Mangalitza, Middle White, Oxford Sandy & Black, Pietrain, Tamworth and Welsh.

The majority of our traditional native breeds have less than 500 sows, which puts them at risk of extinction. One of the most important tasks of the Association is to register the birth of all pedigree litters of pigs so that we can maintain and hopefully increase the number of registered breeding pigs in each of these breeds to ensure the safety and survival of our unique genetic heritage.

The chain of pedigree registration goes right back to 1884. Piglets born to pedigree parents must be recorded if the chain is to continue. If these piglets fall out of the system it is very difficult and expensive to prove their pedigree.

By joining the BPA and registering your pigs you will be part of this important conservation project.

The Association provides certification if you are planning to sell your pigs for meat. There are significant premiums available for pedigree pork. Pedigree registration allows you to sell breeding stock for higher prices and the Association organises an Annual Pedigree Auction Sale.

The BPA also represents the interests of pedigree breeders to government and tries to prevent the introduction of legislation that would damage your breed or your livelihood.

Pedigree pigs can also be entered into agricultural shows. Showing pigs is great fun for all the family and is a fantastic shop window for the public to see our native breeds and to raise awareness of the need for conservation.

THE IMPORTANCE OF PEDIGREE BREEDING

YOU OWE IT TO THE NEXT GENERATION

How does it work

Pedigree is Simple – Pedigree means I know who this pig is and I know who its pedigree parents are. Pedigree is all about identity and proving it.

The three step plan.

Step one – Identify your piglets soon after birth when you can still be sure who the parents are.

Step two – Record that information on the BPA database

Step three – Select the pigs that are suitable for breeding the next generations of pedigree pigs and register them in the BPA herdbook

The rules

1. Newly born pigs have to be individually identified and recorded on the BPA database with details of their birth and parents within 10 weeks. This is so we have a chance to inspect them whilst they are still young and their parents are still around if we need to take a DNA test.
2. Only the breeder may birth notify a litter and you must be the registered owner of the dam. The boar could be borrowed or rented but the sow must be registered to you.
3. Only the breeder can register a birth notified pig. A registered pig carries the herd name or prefix of the breeder. If you sold a pig for fattening because you didn't think it was good enough then you wouldn't want someone else to register the pig using your herd name.
4. Only the registered owner can transfer the ownership of a registered pig. (You can't tell the DVLA computer that you own your neighbours car.)
5. You must keep certain records on farm to back up your pedigree records. The BPA has the right to inspect your pigs and your records and take DNA samples for pedigree verification.
6. You must comply with DEFRA rules and regulations designed to protect pigs from the spread of disease. This means registering your herd with the local Animal Health Office and completing movement licences when you move your pigs.

EAR MARKING

Every pedigree pig reared in every litter must be ear-marked. Ear-marking must be carried out by the breeder of a pig (the person on whose premises the animal was born), be completed before weaning or mixing with another litter and in any case not later than eight weeks of age.

The basic BPA requirement for ear-marking with regard to Herd Book identification purposes is an ear number and possibly Herd Designation Letters. Commence allocating numbers from 1 for the first litter. Mark each sex separately, starting with males. Each subsequent pig will have a separate number in sequence. Continue the numerical progression with subsequent litters.

The BPA recommends Tattooing or Notching for Pedigree Identification. If you opt to use tags as your only form of identification you must inform the BPA in writing and follow the rules for double tagging registered pigs. Plastic button tags with your DEFRA herdmark on one side and your HDL and ear number on the other are best. We do not recommend metal tags for pedigree identification. Pigs for showing must be tattooed or notched.

Birth notified pigs can be identified with ear tattoos, ear notches or ear tags.

Registered pigs must be identified with ear tattoos, ear notches or double tags (one in each ear). The BPA database can hold two ID's for each registered pig which could be a notch and a tag, a tattoo and a tag or two tags with different numbers. Registered pigs identified with tags must be double tagged, one in each ear, the tag numbers can be the same or different. It is recommended that every registered pig should have two forms of identification recorded on the BPA database.

Replacement ID. Tattoos fade, Ear notches can get torn and tags can get pulled out. If your registered pig needs a replacement ID you must apply in writing to the BPA. An inspection and DNA testing may be required.

BRITISH PIG ASSOCIATION GENERAL RULES

1. In addition to Birth Notification and Registration details provided through official BPA forms, the Association expects the Member to keep private records, covering:
 - Service Date Register (including identities of boars)
 - Sow and Progeny Register
 - Ear Number Register
 - Dates of ear marking
2. The Association or any person(s) authorised by the BPA Council will have the right to inspect such records and pigs of a Member.
3. If at any time the Association is of the opinion that a Member has failed to keep suitable records relating to his pigs, or believes that the particulars of the pigs submitted by a Member to the association are or are likely to be for any reason inaccurate, or is dissatisfied with the management of a Member's herd, they may refuse either absolutely or for a limited period that is considered proper to register in the Herd Book the pigs of any such Member.

The Association may at any time delete from the Herd Book any entry therein which is either incorrect or open to reasonable doubt.

The Association has the discretionary power of investigating all cases of alleged wilful misrepresentation or other misconduct or irregularity, which may come to its notice and of dealing with in such manner as it may think fit.

4. The Association may withhold all or any privileges of membership if the person fails to pay monies owing to the Association.
5. The Association may from time to time require the keeping of further relevant pedigree breeding records.
6. Members wishing to sell by auction under the Association's auspices, pure-bred pigs registered or eligible for registration in the Association's Herd Book may adopt the National Pig Auction Rules (available from the BPA).
7. No Member shall sell or offer or advertise for sale a pure-bred pig by name unless it has actually been registered in the Herd Book. This rule applies to any form of sale, whether by Private Treaty or by Auction, and whether under the Association's auspices, or not.
8. If any entry for the Herd Book is cancelled, and the cancellation is accepted by the Association as reasonable, the name or names and numeral given to the pig (as shown on the entry form) shall not be given to any other pig.
9. The BPA will not tolerate any abusive behaviour towards its staff.
10. Detailed Bye-Laws of the Association are available on request.

The BPA Pedigree Pork Scheme

The BPA Pedigree Pork Scheme promotes the sale of pork from pedigree pigs direct to the public through farm shops, farmers markets, local butchers and mail order.

The Pedigree Pork section of the BPA website has a special search facility so that the public can find producers in their area who sell direct. Members of the scheme automatically appear in these listings provided that they have birth notified their pigs. To make best use of the scheme you should give us your website address to appear in your listing. Buyers can then visit your site to check which markets you attend or the opening hours of your shop. If you sell through a local butcher you could also give their details. If you do not have your own website the BPA offers a webpage service for you to have a dedicated page on the BPA site where you can advertise your pigs and your pork.

Meat certificates are now available on-line and can be printed for display in your shop. Pedigree Pork leaflets are available to scheme members with space for your own label or stamp. Pedigree pork members receive special e-mails with details of forthcoming events and sales opportunities.

The BPA promotes the scheme at shows throughout the year including the BBC Good Food Shows, the Winter Fairs and the Smithfield Show.

Membership of the scheme is free to BPA members and all you have to do to sign up is complete this form and return it to the BPA office.
